THE DEMOCRATIC DEFEAT.

LEARNING WHEN TOO LATE THAT THEY MIGHT HAVE PREVENTED IT.

The Resolution Giving the Lieutenant-Governer the Appointment of the Committees Not Receiving the Required Number of Votes-Jacoba Hinting at Nomething that he Says will Surprise the Country.

ALBANT, Feb. 16.—After the Democratic Senators recovered from their stamped yesterday, they found that, according to the Senators recovered from their stamped yesterday, they found that, according to the Senators recovered from their stamped yesterday they found that committees should have had seventeen votes—a majority of all the Senators recovered the Committees should have had seventeen votes—a majority of all the Senators recovered the Committees should have had seventeen votes—a majority of all the Senators recovered the Committees should have had seventeen votes—a majority of all the Senators of lected. It had only fifteen votes—a majority of all the Senators present. The Lieutenant-Governor had declared the resolution carried, and the Senate adjourned before any-body made the discovery that the rule had been violated. Mr. Pitts and other parliamentarians on the Republican side admitted that had the point been raised at the time the resolution would have been defeated; but they took the ground that the failure of the Democratic object was equivalent to unanimous consent that the resolution should nass. In the Senate this morning Mr. Jacobs made a vain attempt to undo yesterday's work. The journal of

SYLVESTER'S INSANE DELUSION.

Belleving that he was Called Upon to Sacrifice his Son as a Burnt Offering. PROVIDENCE, Feb. 16 .- Enos Sylvester, about 35 years of age, who has lived for the past five years at 74 Printing street, in this city, last night attempted to destroy his six-yearold son, while laboring under the insane delusion that he had been called upon by Christ to sacrifice his child as a burnt offering, as Abraham was in Biblical times. Sylvester is a machinist by trade. For some time past he locked and bolted in the ordinary way, but were tied with pieces of cord wherever a hold could sit motionless with his eyes gazing on vacancy, and his mind apparently wrapped up in meditating upon some dismal project. He would suddenly spring up, mutter incoherently, tear his hair, and walk the room like a madman. At suddenly spring up, mutter incoherently, tear his hair, and walk the room like a madman. At times in the middle of the night, he would get up from his bed, light a lamp, and stand by the bedside of his son, looking down upon him with an agonized expression, and then, as though seized with some powerful overruling spirit, he would ascend to the attie, and lie there meaning pitifully.

Last night the neighbors were startled by hearing Mrs. Sylvester run out into the street calling for help. Several men hastened to her house, and found that Sylvester had become a raving maniac by brooding over the act which he believed he had been called upon to perform. He had piled up a lot of kindling wood in the centre of the room, and was preparing to bind his only son upon it and burn him. The insane man was taken to the police station, and after he had been locked up he raved, tore his hair and clothing, and destroyed one of the wood benches in his cell. He was in a more quiet mood this morning, but he will probably have to be taken to the insane asylum.

Since the family moved into the house they have held aloof from the few neighbors. Their doors were generally kept fastened, and the curtains down, except in the kitchen. At length the neighbors began to shrug their shoulders and make remarks about the strange way those people acted. Sylvester's wife had been at times afraid of him, and thought that he was acting queer but never dreamed that It was the dawning of an insanity which would soon chill her blood by the horror of its outbreak. Sylvester says he was born in Maine. His son, whom he attempted to destroy, is a bright-looking boy. The family are destitute, and must become objects of charity.

Washington, Feb. 16.-The Fiske jubilee singers arrived here last evening, and were compelled to wander about the streets nearly all night. Dying in a Dispensory-The Story Told by the Companion of a Woman who Went There for Treatment-A Physician Reticent.

Ellen Slevin, 55 years old, a widow, living with her daughter aged about 20 years, at 231 Moti street, fell from her bed about five weeks ago and dislo-cated her right shoulder. The hurt was at times very cated her right shoulder. The hurt was at times very painted, and yesterday morning, accompanied by Mrs. Corrigan, a neighbor, she went to the Bellevue Medical College in East Twenty-sixth street. Finding that they must wait till afternoon before abscould be attended to, they walked to the New York Dispensary, at 137 Centre street, arriving at about 11 octock. The walking gave Mrs. Slevin in the street of the New York Dispensary, at 137 Centre street, arriving at about 11 octock. The walking gave Mrs. Slevin in tense pain. One of the surgeons inquired what the trouble was, Mrs. Corrigan says, and then directed Mrs. Slevin to bare her shoulder. She did so, and three of Slevin to bare her shoulder. She did so, and three or four doctors examined it. They then laid her on a soft, and, after administering an annesthetic, worked over her for forty-five minutes. When Mrs. Slevin recovered from the effects of the annesthetic she called for a glass of wine. Mrs. Corrigan remarked that Mrs. Slevin looked pale and queer," and asked the doctors to send for a priest. Mrs. Corrigan says that the doctors placed also caps." on the woman's atomach, and then she ras for a priest. When she returned Mrs. Slevin was dead lier daughter was notified, and the body was taken to lier home.

Mrs. Slevin's death was reported to the Coroner's of fice at about 3 o'clock, and Coroner Brady, who was o'd duty, could not investigate the case yesterday.

Dr. Hepworth Speaking Against Catholics. At a meeting "to protest against Roman Catholic influence in American politics and educational affairs," in the Second Presbyterian Church, Clinton street, Brooklyn, last evening, the Rev. Dr. George H. Hepworth said that it was utterly impossible, in his Hepworth said that it was atterly impossible, in his opinion, for a thorough Roman Cathode to be a genuine American citizen, and he was afraid of the encroachments of a church which did not believe in the eternal power of American institutions, and was entirely autocratic. He was afraid that what could not be accomplished by shoer strength might be done by the courage of cunning. The policy of Homanism was to keep every man in the dark, while republicanism demanded that every man should have hight; and it had been settled by the Pope himself that Rome was opposed to the individuality that republicanism bequeatly to every citizen, in conclusion, Dr. Hepworth argued that the security of our dovernment depends upon the ability of the people to think, and nothing else, and declared that he was strongly in favor of compulsory education.
